EXTERMINATE THE PEST.

THERE has been too much benevolence in dealing with the I. W. W. as a national pest. The nation has endured the presence of this class of revolutionaries so long that their leaders begin to believe they have some legal rights in maintaining their organization. Thirteen years ago the first alarm was sounded from Goldfield where the famous General Funston came in person to report on the menace which the late Senator Nixon had presented to Washington with such circumstantial detail that there was no denying the request for the presence of troops to regulate that community which had sunk into an abyss of despair in trying to find a solution for the problem. Had the advice of representative citizens of Goldfield been acted upon with determination the country would have been cleared of the germs in process of dissemination at that time. Many of the leaders of the citizens' movement and miners of the desert class who spurred all connection with the I. W. W. while still clinging the charter of the Western Federation of Miners are in Tonopah today. Their testimony would furnish an illuminating chapter on the progress of the organization which began operations and secured a foothold in Goldfield by seizing control of the miners' federation. This was only a means to an end, and that end was the complete mastery of the biggest and best gold camp then on the map of the United States. The working miners were bowed into submission, while mine operators were terrorized to an extent that precluded the working of their properties. Funston's presence elicited the facts about the vicious principles of the early Bolsheviks whose organization would have been stamped from the face of the earth if the recommendations of the little Kansas general had been taken and acted upon. Nevertheless nothing was done and the brood of murderers, cut-throats and assassins were left to their own devices to spread their infamous doctrines in new quarters. Tonopah took prompt steps to prevent a repetition of the Nihilistic practices by acting instantly to throttle the evil as soon as the monster raised its head in the community. Here the officers of the law acted without hesitation and acted so effectively that the prime mover was landed in the penitentiary to concoct fresh plans for new atrocities after serving his sentence. Tonopah did not hesitate how to act or what to do but proceeded at once to purge the community of the evil by making the riddance actual.

Had the national government taken the same decisive action there would be no bomb shipments through the mails. Neither would there have been the reign of terror in the agricultural regions of California where the hopgrowers and cotton growers became victims of a murderous sabotage, the destruction of millions of property and the loss of scores of lives. Tonopah has shown there is a way to deal with lawlessness. This camp has shown the initiative which should not have been lost on the government in dealing with the malign influence.

OUTRAGE AGAINST CHILDHOOD.

IT REMAINED for another southern court to decide unconstitutional the law providing for the conservation of child life against the monstrous exactions of southern mill owners and taskmasters who are making fortunes by commercializing the flesh and blood of the rising youth. President Wilson made his second campaign on the strength of his action in checking the vicious practices of the southern splinters in using child labor for the operation of their mills. The woman vote was caught by the slogan that Wilson saved our children just in the same way that he kept us out of war. The election was no sooner won than a convenient instrument of the administration decided that the child labor law was invalid and permitted southern mill owners to return to their former cruelties standing the growth of the future mothers and fathers of the nation by employing them in a fetid atmosphere for ten and twelve hours a day until their tender fingers saturated the cotton fabric with their infantile blood. Then Congress enacted another law covering the same ground. This statute had the endorsement of the highest attorneys and the attorney general's office pronounced it judgment proof and a safe instrument for the conservation of juvenile life. How far these opinions went may be conjectured from the fact that the self same judge with one stroke of his judicial pen set at defiance the most eminent authorities of his own political party by declaring the law unconstitutional. Such conduct is most reprehensible when it sets at naught the opinions of leading American jurists and engenders the suspicion that Congress is nothing more than an aggregation of imbeciles which does not know enough to draft a simple law that will stand the test of the courts. Had the test been made in a case arising from the use of child labor in eastern mills the southern jurist might not have been so enthusiastic in rushing to the defense of capitalists who fatten their bank accounts through the martyrdom of American babies.

The Italian question and the Victory loan are submerged in the all-absorbing question that occupies the attention of the treasury department in deciding whether corsets are properly classed as underwear or garments. In the opinion of the Bonanza they are next to underwear which is close enough for a legal determination.

Lassen responds to the opening of the tourist season by belching forth fire and smoke and shaking up the adjoining country with those delicious tremors that do no harm yet form a distinct asset for extracting dollars from the confiding sightseer.

Since the people of the United States are now practically on the national water wagon we presume Bill Bryan feels that he is even with them for not making him their president on any of the numerous occasions he has begged for the honor.—El Paso Times.

One thing, the San Francisco woman who took ship the other day for Japan to, as she put it, "rid that country of the blighting curse of rum," doesn't need to keep hot poultices on her nerve to keep it from going torpid.—Macon Telegraph.

QUEEN DIVIDE HAS 110 ACRES

Frank Lathrop and associates of San Francisco have organized the Queen Divide Mining company with one of the largest and most attractive acreages in the district. The group consists of six claims known as the Silver King, Silver Queen, Silver Top, Silver Lynn, Big Chief and Happy Jack comprising 110 acres. These form the best inside group placed lately since they adjoin the Signal on the north, the old Flivvy group owned by the Bevis on the south and the Big Divide on the west. The locations cover the main vein system where the ground is heavily fissured and cross fissured with remarkably fine surface showings. The company is already at work getting started on the preliminary work for active development which will be of the aggressive order. The machinery equipment contemplates placing one compressor for serving both the Syndicate and the Queen properties which will make a material saving in the cost of developing both estates. The property was sold by Charles K. Quist, Bob Marker, "Doc" W. Harrison, Charles Kisthofer, Tom Munn, and Walter J. Drysdale. The personnel of the officers and directors will be found in the advertisement of the company on page four of this issue.

GINGER NEEDED FOR BIG LOAN

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3.—Loan subscriptions have passed the $1,750,000,000 mark. The treasury's review said today: "There is a very slight improvement in interest." Subscriptions must average half a billion daily for the remainder of the campaign. The war department says the demobilization camps reports indicate that the men are investing their bonuses in Liberty bonds.

DIES FROM PNEUMONIA

Following an illness of ten days with influenza-pneumonia, John Ohman, well known mining man, died Thursday night at a Reno hospital. His widow, two daughters, Marjorie and Alice, and one son, John, survive.

Mr. Ohman came to Nevada 11 years ago and had been engaged in mining in various parts of the state. He returned to Tonopah a few weeks ago after coming up from the Divide to visit his family, and was taken ill a fortnight ago. He was removed to Reno at once and up until yesterday it was thought that he would recover. He was a native of Indiana and was 45 years old.

NO CESSATION FOR HUNGARIANS

(By Associated Press) GENEVA, May 3.—The Rumanian-Czechoslovak governments are reported to have refused to entertain the offer of Belakun, the Hungarian foreign minister, to make territorial concessions providing fighting was stopped on all fronts. The Rumanians and Czechoslovaks continue to march on Budapest.

ELEVEN HOUSES COMING FOR WINGFIELD COMPANIES

Eleven houses for the Hercules, Giant and Anchor Divide companies controlled by the Wingfield-Brougher interests are now on their way from Goldfield and are being erected as fast as they arrive on the Divide. Contracts have been let for sinking the three shafts which are going down for the first 50 feet after which the power will be running and the big surface equipments will be in position to continue the work. Machinery for the Apex Divide has also arrived.
